Al MacInnis 'proud to be a Flame'

Al MacInnis received several gifts while being honoured at the Saddledome on Monday and it was announced that the Flames would donate $25,000 to the charity of his choice. "It was the people of Calgary who welcomed me to the NHL, who made me proud to be a Flame," he said. MacInnis spent his first 13 National Hockey League seasons in Calgary, beginning in 1981.

Adoption offers pour in for pet husky

► Two-day-old baby boy died after he was bitten by the dog in his Airdrie home

Animal lovers from across the country are volunteering to adopt a pet husky that killed a newborn baby in Airdrie.

At least a dozen people have made requests through the city of Airdrie and many more have sent messages to the baby's parents.

"Euthanizing this dog will not bring that little baby back," said Ron Pawlowski of Bradford, Ont., a business professor who wants to have the dog moved to his farm.

"I know that the whole country shares in this poor family's grief. If this dog proves to be no further a threat, I hope that the dog can be given a new home."

A family friend has said the baby was crying in his crib, and the dog was likely trying to comfort him when it bit him once in the head. The female dog had previously given birth to several litters of puppies. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Second Bolsa murder trial begins

A triple murder at a Calgary eatery on New Year's Day 2009 came after elaborate planning to target one of the victims, court heard Monday.

Those remarks, offered by Crown prosecutor Susan Karpa, came during the opening proceedings in the first-degree murder trial of 28-year-old Real Christian Honorio.

He is charged with participating in the killings of known gang member Sanjeev Mann, associate Aaron Bendle and bystander Keni Su'a at the Bolsa Vietnamese restaurant. Two others were already convicted of the killings in October.

No Ontario support for oilsands

Alberta Premier Alison Redford says she is surprised and a little disappointed by comments from her Ontario counterpart over the oilsands.

Redford was reacting to comments from Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty, who publicly rejected her calls to do more to advocate for the oilsands.

McGuinty said the industry means a higher Canadian dollar, which hurts Ontario's manufacturing sector. Redford says that rising oilsands profits lift the entire Canadian economy and Ontario in particular. THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Parking on the Calgary Stampede grounds could be streamlined if officials adopt the ParkPlus system commonly used in other high-traffic areas in the city, suggests parking authority head Troy McLeod.

Stampede could lasso ParkPlus technology

► Easing congestion for Calgarians headed to grounds the biggest advantage of system: Parking authority head ► Discussions ongoing, no formal trials set

JEREMY NOLAÏS

Motorists late for a Flames game or urgently craving a batch of mini-doughnuts could someday avoid lines at the Calgary Stampede grounds entrance gate if officials adopt a well-tested parking technology.

Calgary Parking Authority (CPA) head Troy McLeod said discussions have begun between his organization and the Stampede about potentially outfitting their parking lots with the ParkPlus system, which utilizes patented metres and mobile-payment options.

"The biggest thing would be traffic control," McLeod said. "You could be buying popcorn and paying for your parking on your cellphone at the same time."

The CPA is currently in the process of evaluating the cost of installing ParkPlus at the site of the "Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth," but Stampede spokesperson Doug Fraser stressed no formal decision has been made on using the technology.

"It's far from being complete," he said of the proposal, before adding that it was not clear whether the technology would result in lower parking prices for users.

Other municipalities have also approached the CPA inquiring about the ParkPlus technology.

Officials from Edmonton were in town to discuss the benefits of the Council says no more Mission Road cash

City council kiboshed a request for more money for the Mission Road Main Street Innovation Project after the budget nearly doubled from its original projections.

The visioning process for Mission Road, spearheaded by Ald. Gian-Carlo Carra, involved community consultation to come up with a design for redeveloping the area.

What was originally expected to cost $300,000 ballooned to nearly $440,000 to date, and costs were expected to climb close to $600,000.

Carra was hoping council would approve another $90,000 to continue,

"Innovation is messy and this is case-in-point," he argued in chambers.

Ald. Gael MacLeod agreed council should see the initiative through to the end.

"I think this should be the beginning of the conversation, not the end," she said.

Ultimately, the majority voted against it, effectively killing the project in the process.

"Once we get into these messy situations, it starts costing us a lot of money," said Ald. Diane Colley-

Abusers often show 'two faces': Advocate

- ▶ Man at centre of Airdrie murder-suicide had history of domestic abuse
- ▶ Tragedy can serve to educate others in relationships, advocate says

JEREMY NOLAÏS
@METRONEWS.CA

At first encounter, they can appear charming, caring and willing to better themselves.

But it's once a chronic abuser has developed trust with a prospective partner that an ugly side tends to come out, says a Calgary advocate who believes much can be learned from a tragic murder-suicide in Airdrie last week.

Single mother Andrea Conroy was found dead in her home Friday, family members have confirmed. The man believed to have killed her, Rick Doucette, was involved in a relationship with her last year and had a history of domestic abuse, according to legal documents.

He was found dead in Nanton on Saturday.

"I would argue that there are some abusers who very deliberately are very good at putting on two faces," said Kevin McNichol, executive director for HomeFront. "One is the public face they show ... and then there's the other side — the scary, abusive side that comes out at other points of the relationship."

He added that partners are often drawn to helping individuals who claim to be working through their issues, believing they can help them change.

"An abuser might seek out those people specifically," McNichol said.

'Young & stupid'

▶ When reached in Toronto Sunday, Rick Doucette's wife told Metro she was "young and stupid" when she met the competitive bodybuilder. She filed a restraining order against him after years of abuse — a claim verified by court documents — and would "probably be dead" if he hadn't fallen for another women.

It could be four years before green carts roll out in communities across Calgary as the city works to determine the scope of a composting facility that will inevitably have to be built.

Based on the scope of facility, Jim Miller, program manager for the organics facility with the city, said there are a number of factors that will need to be determined once the pilot project wraps next year.

"This is a large industrial-type operation — this is not a backyard compost," he said. "We're talking many, many thousands of tonnes and that's a big part of this pilot project."

Council members will receive a report Wednesday outlining a basic timeline for the green-cart program.

Ald. Brian Pincott said 2016 is far too long to wait for the whole city to start participating.

"It doesn't need to be any bigger now than it was two months ago, when the timeline two months ago was two years shorter."

Pincott said that, should the facility take as long as projected to be fully functional, it could hamper the city's goal of diverting 80 per cent of waste from landfills by 2020.

Police probe suspicious death

The neighbour of a woman who died after allegedly being beaten in her home for two days said she didn't hear a thing before the 51-year-old rang her doorbell, her face bloodied and bruised.

Kimmie Fournier said she'd met the woman, who she knew as Marie, once before.

"She couldn't open her mouth to speak and I was worried she had a broken jaw," said Fournier.

The woman told Fournier a man and three women had beaten her and kept her there, after a rent dispute at the home on 85 Avenue and 108 Street on Friday, she said.

At the woman's request she put her in a cab.

"I was surprised when the detectives came to talk to me at midnight and told me she passed away," she said.

Edmonton police were calling the death suspicious Monday, as they probed the alleged altercation that also sent a 23-year-old man to hospital.

Charges are pending against a 28-year-old man in police custody.

3 ENGINEERS MOURNED

Black box could hold clues to deadly VIA derailment

Railway officials grappled Monday with the deaths of three of their own in a "rare" deadly passenger-train derailment as investigators focused on a black box that captured the crew's final moments — crucial evidence in the case.

Toronto. It was the first time in more than a decade that VIA Rail employees were killed aboard one of the company's trains in a derailment.

Two of the engineers, Peter Snarr, 52, and Ken Simmonds, 56, both of Toronto, were experienced drivers, each with more than 30 years in the industry, VIA said. A trainee, Patrick Robinson, 40, of Cornwall, Ont., joined them in the cab to observe, though investigators haven't ruled out the possibility that he was driving at some point.

As investigators pored over the wreckage, the head of VIA Rail said the derailment that killed the men and injured 45 passengers has sent shockwaves through the close-knit company. In an afternoon visit to the site, VIA president and CEO Marc Laliberté called the collision "tragic," but stressed it was a rare occurrence. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A Liberal party researcher has resigned for tweeting salacious information about Public Safety Minister Vic Toews to protest the government's online surveillance bill.

Interim Liberal Leader Bob Rae told a stunned House of Commons that one of his staffers was responsible for creating the Vikileaks30 Twitter account that circulated alleged details of Toews' divorce.

Rae said the offending staffer — later identified as Adam Carroll — had resigned, and the leader extended a full apology to Toews.

"I discussed the matter with that individual this morning. He offered his resignation and I've accepted his resignation," Rae told the Commons.

► Chelsea Edwards, a friend of the late Shannen Koostachin, and Shannen's father, Andrew, appear at a press conference on Parliament Hill on Monday.

A dream comes closer to reality

► Motion calls for improved First Nations education
► Campaign started by teen who later died in crash

A teenage student from Attawapiskat was in Ottawa Monday to witness what could be a major turning point in her campaign to improve education in First Nations across the country.

Sixteen-year-old Chelsea Edwards is the face of the Shannen's Dream campaign, named after her good friend Shannen Koostachin, who died in an accident in 2010.

Like Shannen, Chelsea wants to see her reserve and many others like it gain the wherewithal to build a solid school and provide an education that is as good as what non-native kids would get off-reserve.

The House of Commons voted unanimously in favour of an NDP motion on Monday night calling for funding that would put First Nations schools on an equal footing with provincial schools.

It passed with the support of the governing Conservatives.

Chelsea went to elementary classes in a collection of chilly portables next to contaminated land on her reserve near James Bay.

A recent federal-First Nations task force found that at least 100 schools across the country were unfit for learning — adding to the problems that mean less than half the students on reserves ever graduate from high school.

Those conditions prompted Shannen, also from Attawapiskat, to spearhead a student-led lobbying campaign for decent schools and education.

Four years ago, Shannen confronted then-Indian Affairs minister Chuck Strahl and was nominated for an International Children's Peace Prize. She died in a car accident in 2010 at the age of 15.

Chelsea, with the help of her MP Charlie Angus, picked up where Shannen left off.

Dozens of Nunavut students are homeless and without any of their worldly goods after a fire razed an apartment block in the middle of a frigid Arctic night in Iqaluit.

Early reports from the territory's coroner said two people died in the blaze, which broke out late Sunday night. But the RCMP said that could not be confirmed.

There was, however, no doubt about the fire's impact.

"Most people have lost everything," Iqaluit Mayor Madeleine Redfern said Monday.

Most of the residents were students at Nunavut Arctic College, along with their spouses, children and other adult family members.

Putin warns the West

► Russian PM campaigns on anti-U.S. message ► Warns West to stay out of Syrian conflict ► Says U.S. trying to start uprisings in Russia

Prime Minister Vladimir Putin warned against military intervention in Syria or an attack on Iran in scathing criticism of the West on Monday as he laid out his foreign-policy priorities less than a week before Russia's presidential election. Putin said the West had backed the Arab Spring to advance its interests in the region, and that instead of promoting democracy the revolts had given rise to religious extremism.

Anti-Western rhetoric has been a key part of Putin's campaign.

Study: Rich people not as ethical

A new study says rich people are more likely to engage in unethical behaviour than their poorer counterparts.

That's the finding from researchers at the University of California and the University of Toronto, published today in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

In two tests, researchers found that upper-class drivers were more likely to cut off other cars and pedestrians at crosswalks.

The researchers used age, vehicle make and appearance to assess drivers' social class.

In another series of tests involving undergraduate students and adults, researchers found that those who consider themselves "upper class" were more likely to take valued items from others, lie during negotiations and cheat to increase their chances of winning a prize.

Consistent

The findings in the tests were consistent across age, gender, ethnicity, religion and political orientation of the participants.

The authors of the study added that there are also many examples of ethical behaviour amongst more affluent people, such as philanthropic work.

India probes borrower suicides

The government of India's Andhra Pradesh state said Monday it would push prosecutors to move ahead with 76 criminal cases against employees of Indian lenders it believes were involved with driving borrowers to suicide.

The comments came in response to an Associated Press story that showed, despite denials, that top officials from India's SKS Microfinance had information that implicated its employees in borrower suicides. SKS is a leader in India's microfinance industry, which gives small loans to the poor.

R. Subrahmanyam, principal secretary for rural development in Andhra Pradesh, said the story spurred state officials to attend to the cases.

U.K.'s Sun paid sources, police say

- Accusation follows launch of Sunday edition
- Inquiry shifts from press practices to corruption

Rupert Murdoch's top-selling U.K. tabloid, The Sun, had a culture of making illegal payments to corrupt public officials in return for stories, a senior police officer said Monday, as Murdoch announced that the paper's first-ever Sunday edition had sold more than three-million copies.

Sue Akers, a Metropolitan Police deputy assistant commissioner, told Britain's media ethics inquiry that the newspaper openly referred to paying its sources and that such payments had been authorized at a senior level.

Her comments came the day Murdoch's company paid former teen singing sensation Charlotte Church $949,020 in a phone-hacking settlement for violating her and her family's privacy.

Akers said Sun journalists had paid not only police officers but also military, health and other government officials. One official received a total of $126,536 over several years, Akers said, and one journalist had been given more than $237,255 in cash to pay his sources. She said payments went far beyond acceptable practices such as buying sources a meal or a drink.

"A network of corrupted officials" had provided The Sun with stories that were mostly "salacious gossip," said Akers.

Akers did not indicate when or if the payments had ended, but Murdoch insisted that practices at The Sun have now changed.

LOOKING FOR LOVE IN FRONT OF THE CAMERA

SHE SAYS ...

JESSICA NAPIER

particularly The Bachelor. I remember watching the first episode of the now-infamous dating show in high school. Ten years and 16 seasons later, I still love watching doe-eyed dental hygienists compete for the affections of rose-wielding Prince Charmings.

Knowing the success rate of these made-for-TV romances, you have to wonder who on Earth would ever sign up for this show?

When the national casting call for The Bachelor Canada came to town, I knew I had to stop by. I needed to find out how so many smart, successful, attractive women end up looking for love in the most public and potentially humiliating way possible.

When I arrived at the auditions, I was surprised and a bit disappointed to enter a room full of normal-looking ladies. No crazy models or emotional basket cases, just average women dressed in their best first-date outfits. Where were the vapid fame whores, the mentally unstable divorcees, the hopelessly romantic cheerleaders, and why weren't any of them in evening gowns?

None of the women I saw were past their primes — many of them were barely of legal drinking age — so why were they resorting to reality television in order to find The One?

Rachel, a 29-year-old banker, told me that it just happens to be the right timing for her. "I'm pretty adventurous," she said, "so why not give it a try?"

Personally, I can think of a million reasons why, but I had to admire her confidence.

But how do these hopeful contestants plan on dealing with the pressure and the inevitable infighting that comes along with this not-so-monogamous dating situation? Twenty-eight-year-old Barbra told me that she might not get along with everyone on the show, but she plans on treating it like a job. "You don't necessarily like your co-workers," she said. "But you make an effort to tolerate them in order to get the job done." Maybe that's true, but your co-workers aren't hooking up with your boyfriend in an adjacent hot tub.

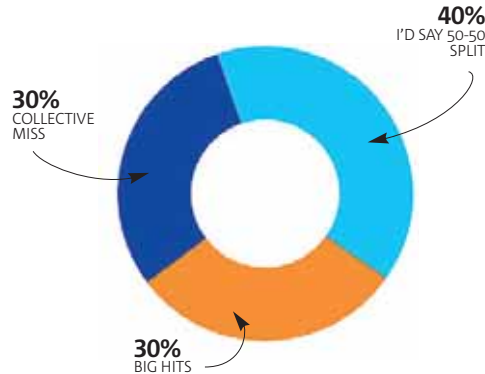

Ultimately, most of the hopeful bachelorettes were pretty sincere and genuinely hoping to fall in love. I guess if you haven't met anyone through your friends and you've failed at online dating, going in front of the camera to look for Mr. Right is just the next logical option for today's single ladies.

The Canadian hockey comedy Goon is scoring big at the theatres. Alliance Films says the hockey flick claimed the top spot at the Canadian box office this weekend. It grossed an estimated $1.2 million. The film stars Seann William Scott and Liev Schreiber as on-ice bruisers who barrel their way through the minor leagues. Goon was written by Jay Baruchel and Evan Goldberg and co-stars Alison Pill. Other films that opened last weekend include the Paul Rudd-Jennifer Aniston comedy Wanderlust, Tyler Perry's Good Deeds and the Navy SEALs flick Act of Valor, which topped the box office south of the border. Director Michael Dowse (Fubar, It's All Gone Pete Tong) shot Goon in Winnipeg and nearby Portage la Prairie, Man.

Billy's blackface sparks Twitter talk

Some are questioning Billy Crystal's impression of Sammy Davis Jr. in his opening number as Oscar host. As part of Crystal's opening montage, he parodied Woody Allen's Midnight in Paris, going back in time to the 1920s. Then Crystal, performing as Davis in blackface, popped up and suggested they go kill Hitler.

Crystal played Davis the same way many times on Saturday Night Live in the 1980s, but that didn't stop hundreds from questioning the bit on Twitter.

A-Listers pack Vanity Fair's Oscar after-party

On Sunday, Vanity Fair's held its always compact A-list Academy Award after-party at West Hollywood's Sunset Tower Hotel, one of several parties following the 84th annual Academy Awards at the Hollywood & Highland Center. Starlets and Oscar nominees and winners mingled. Jonah Hill, nominated for as best supporting actor for Moneyball, smiled and shouted out a sassy expletive decrying his and the film's loss, surrounded by a pack of friends, including Seth Rogen. Rogen, who hosted Saturday's Film Independent Spirit Awards, also laughed and drank with fellow funny guy Jason Segel, star of The Muppets movie.

In one corner booth tucked to the side of the party's outdoor patio, Gwyneth Paltrow held court with her Coldplay husband Chris Martin and silver screen vet Jane Fonda, while talking with Cameron Diaz.

City News Service says she posted $20,000 bail and was released at 2:55 a.m. Monday. Police Sgt. Enrique Mend wouldn't give details about the incident.

The leg that launched a thousand memes

► Angelina Jolie's Oscar stance still subject of much discussion

DOROTHY ROBINSON
SCENE@METRONews.ca

It's two days after the Oscars and the world isn't talking about how Billy Crystal did as a host (meh!), who won (The Artist! A lot!), or who lost (Viola Davis, you were robbed!).

Nope. The world is focused on one thing: Angelina Jolie's leg.

Her awkward red carpet stance, in which she made sure her right leg was constantly on display through the slit in her black velvet Atelier Versace gown, is a pose that has launched a thousand Internet memes.

There's a Twitter handle — @AngiesRightLeg — that is nearing 15,000 followers with tweets like, "You have to admit I'm one hell of a leg!" and also a Tumblr account entitled "Angelina Jolie'ing," where readers can upload photos of themselves showing off their ashy thighs.

There's no reason for why she stood like that, time and time again. (My theory: Her bony leg was poking out to sniff around for a sandwich.)

But perhaps the funniest mocking of the leg came from The Descendants co-writer Jim Rash, who hit the stage with Alexander Payne and Nat Faxon to accept the award for Best Adapted Screenplay. The look was quickly imitated by Rash and Faxon, but the scribes insist they weren't mocking the actress.

"She's supremely hot," Faxon said backstage at the awards show, while Rash was quick to explain his actions: "I just saw her pose and I thought, you know what, we have exactly the same legs," the writer, who also stars in the sitcom Community, said. "It was more like, 'Oh, she's standing great, I'm going to stand like that, too.'"

Rash better watch it. No one mocks Angelina Jolie in front of her face and gets away with it. The last person to do that was Billy Bob Thornton, and we're pretty sure he's currently working at a Cracker Barrel in Parissapany, N.J.

Many eagle-eyed viewers were convinced they caught Jennifer Lopez having a wardrobe malfunction while presenting at the Oscars, but her stylist, Mariel Haenn, insists there was no nipple-baring.

► You worry about money — maybe a little too much ► Charles Richards, psychotherapist and author of The Psychology of Wealth, tells us how to find the balance

McGUINNESS
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

On this page, we often write about relationships — with food, exercise, significant others. But it's time we addressed a topic that's equally influential, and sometimes completely dysfunctional: your relationship with money.

According to Charles Richards, author of The Psychology of Wealth, money doesn't just indicate power, but has power — we are infused by its energy. And if you're not prepared to manage that energy constructively, it will manage you, often negatively. Here are four typical situations on how to deal.

I've lost my job and my money. How can I find the will to live?

"Situations can change in a heartbeat, so when your identity is tied to what you have or what you do, it's a dangerous place to live from," says Richards. "If being rich, popular and successful gives you meaning and for some tragic reason you can't be that person anymore, you could think your life is over. Connect with a deeper part of yourself (spiritual belief or meditation) that goes beyond what you have and what you do."

I'm petrified of failure.

"Don't let fear of failure stop you from moving forward," says Richards. "Successful people fail many times but they just persevere and take full responsibility for what is going on. Failure is a problem but there's always a way out of it, just as long as you use a little initiative to find out what that is."

All I want in life is to make money. Is that healthy?

"You can be rich financially but have a poverty of soul if that wealth is just self serving. Anyone aiming for greater financial success should serve a higher purpose (philanthropic or spiritual, environmental or health)

The biggest losers

One third of multi-million dollar lottery winners lose all their new-found wealth — and often end up worse off than before they won.

$5.4M Evelyn Adams hit the jackpot twice but that didn't stop her from wasting winnings on her gambling addiction. She ended up broke and living in a trailer park.

$1.9M Welshman Luke Pittard spent it all on a trip to the Canary Islands, a house and a wedding. And just 18 months later he was flipping burgers at McDonalds.

$93K Lindsay Lohan didn't exactly win the lottery but being a child star is similar in the luck department. Celebrity website TMZ reports that the actress hasn't paid her 2009 income tax, let alone 2012.

or strive to empower others."

All this recession talk is making me anxious. How can I stay upbeat despite the current financial turmoil?

Stop listening to the messages of doom and gloom all the time. "Do you want it to be your reality? No, so shut out the drumbeat that comes from the media. Yes, there's a reality to what's going on but if you allow yourself to be influenced by the media bombardment about financial meltdown and hardship then it's going to become a reality for you. Don't assume it's going to become your truth and it won't."

I'm in financial trouble — I can't think, I can't sleep and I'm super stressed!

You can't ignore the practical reality. You have to face it head on.

"Make a plan with clear goals to ease the stress and turn the situation around. This will take discipline, delayed gratification, practical thinking and decision-making. Financial challenges can be positive in that they stimulate creativity as you are forced to find a way out. Once your self worth is healthier you tend to be more expansive in your thinking. You won't be successful until you are willing to take responsibility."

Health Risks Your Nails Reveal

Experts say that our fingernails can show warning signs of underlying health problems. We had freelance writer Michelle Villett look into this in the most recent issue of Best Health magazine.

Ridges

Vertical ridges are common as we age, but if you see horizontal ridges, talk to your doctor; it could indicate respiratory disease, malnutrition or even heart attack risk. They could also be triggered by a deficiency of B vitamins.

Brittle Nails

The cause is genetic. Keeping nails short and using a nail hardener can protect them from splitting or snagging. And getting enough calcium can help, too; for most women ages 19 to 50, the recommended daily amount is 1,000 mg.

Hangnails

These are likely caused by a lack of folic acid or B and C vitamins, says Vink. But they can also be caused by picking or pushing cuticles back. Boost vitamin B and C intake.

with an array of meat-centric offerings.

I finally settled on The Hammer ($14). It sounds intense, but was simply a kielbasa sausage stuffed with truffle cheddar, wrapped in bacon, topped with guinness mustard in a soft baguette. Actually, that is intense.

It arrived with a sort of "how am I supposed to bite into this" kind of charm. Thankfully, I figured out how.

If I can order a Jager Bomb ($9) at lunch and get away with it, then I'm all for it. The Duke's dessert version of the popular shot features vanilla shortcake topped with house-made Jager ice cream and a red bull reduction. Yum. The ice cream was amazing.

I am currently trying to figure out how to obtain a tub of it.

GET YOUR RRSP ON

FUN AND FRUGAL

LESLEY SCORGIE
MONEY@METRONEWS.CA

You only have until tomorrow to make your RRSP contribution for the 2011 tax year; Feb. 29, 2012 is the official deadline. Short on contribution cash? Consider an RRSP loan. Currently, RRSP loans have attractive interest rates, hovering near prime, and have flexible repayment plans. But, it only makes sense to take out an RRSP loan when the taxable benefit you receive from your RRSP contribution is greater than the amount of interest you'll pay on the loan. To help figure out if it's worth it, see an adviser.

The largest benefit of an RRSP loan is that the more you contribute, the more you'll earn through compounded returns. Let's say you decide not to borrow $10,000 to maximize your RRSP at age 30. That $10,000 compounded at nine per cent for 25 years adds up to $86,000 before tax when you're 55. Thus, you would miss out on $76,000 of compounded returns. Meanwhile, your $10,000 RRSP loan at six per cent interest, paid off over 12 months, would cost you less than $350 in interest. Calculate your own borrowing scenario on bankrate.com. You're a good candidate for an RRSP loan if:

- You don't have enough cash to make an RRSP contribution by Feb. 29, 2012
- You have a job and can afford to pay the loan off within 12 months
- You have left over contribution room within your RRSP
- You don't have significant consumer debt; in excess of $5,000.

It used to be that prospective homebuyers would zero in on three places while searching for added value — kitchen, bathroom and rec room. A kitchen island, separate shower and finished basement, preferably with a tiki bar, were guaranteed to draw offers.

Then along came whirlpool tubs, children's wings, great rooms and soaring foyers. But what comes around goes away in the real estate market.

Today, value-conscious buyers and profit-conscious builders are opting for less is more. On the wane are sunrooms, outdoor kitchens, two-storey family rooms and media rooms.

But popular once again are basics such as well-planned spaces, storage and functional (not necessarily fancy) outdoor areas.

The lesson for those house shopping this spring — in the still mostly vibrant Canadian real estate market — is to spend your money on features that are difficult or expensive to add later. The right choices now will pay off when you become a seller. According to a 2011 AVIDBuilder.com survey, Canadian buyers are most eager for the following three home features or qualities:

1. Efficiency The soaring foyer may look great but give it a pass if re-sale value is important. Two-storey rooms and open fireplaces also have reduced appeal because of rising heating costs.

2. Spaces not rooms The number of rooms or overall square-footage is less important than how they fit together. Increasingly buyers are drawn by a home's flow and utility rather than its statistics.

▶ Alison's money rule: When home shopping, focus on good bones to achieve the best bang for your real estate buck.

3. Green, green, green This includes not only energy efficiency in windows, appliances and insulation, but also green building products to reduce or eliminate concerns over toxicity.

There are three specific home features Canadians adore:

1. Walk-in closets
2. Linen closets

3. Family-style kitchens While the survey was primarily focused on features desired by Canadians shopping for homes south of the border, they hold true in every real estate market over time.

Conspicuous consumption in a home can appeal temporarily, but if you are shopping for the best value, pay attention to the basics.

SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY OFFERS REWARDS TO COMMUNITY

Many people say that giving is better than receiving, and now many Calgary corporations are also saying the same thing.

More and more businesses are seeing the value in being socially responsible and giving back to the communities they serve, especially in Calgary.

"Being socially responsible has moved from the nice-to-do spectrum to the need-to-do spectrum," says Robb Price, founder of DeliverGood.org.

"It has become commonplace and expected that businesses give back and act in a socially responsible manner."

DeliverGood matches charities and non-profits who need stuff with people and companies who have stuff by proximity, by mission, by name or by need and has worked with more than 250 charities in 2011. "Our business is built to not only be socially responsible, but to help other business be socially responsible," says Price.

And the corporate world in Calgary has really been stepping up to the plate lately.

On Feb. 24, TELUS announced it would be donating $6 million to Calgary-based charities and community organizations in 2012.

With more than $30 million invested in local community initiatives in Calgary and $3.8 million to 238 grassroots, youth-oriented programs, TELUS Calgary Community Board has made a huge impact in the Calgary community since 2005.

For businesses looking to become more socially responsible, there are resources to help with this task.

"It's refreshing to see organizations like the Canadian Youth Business Foundation supporting organizations who set out to build socially minded businesses," says Price.

"Not only do they support socially-minded businesses, but they travel around Canada promoting this as a business, inspiring people to go after what they're passionate about and make it happen."

Price also offers a few tips on how businesses can become more socially minded:

BUILD A CULTURE, NOT A CAMPAIGN: A socially-minded culture has a beginning and an end, a campaign only has a beginning.

BE PASSIONATE ABOUT IT: Choose a cause that you are passionate about.

COMMIT TO IT: Make your commitment part of your business plan.

MEASURE IT: Live up to your commitment by measuring your results.

TALK ABOUT IT: Tell people what you are doing.

"Celebrating your socially-minded successes will let others know what you're doing and could inspire other businesses to do the same," says Price.

THE VALUE VILLAGE CYCLE

CREATAS IMAGES/THINKSTOCK

OFFERS ONE OF LARGEST RECYCLING PROGRAMS IN WORLD

There are many ways consumers can make small changes in their daily habits in order to have a positive impact on the environment, from switching to energy-efficient light bulbs and eco-friendly cleaning products to carrying reusable shopping bags.

What many don't realize is that one of the easiest ways to "go green" is by shopping thrift. When you shop at Value Village stores and donate reusable items to its non-profit partners, you are keeping goods out of landfills and giving old treasures new life.

"We know millions of families are already starting to clear out their clutter with spring cleaning," said Tony Shumpert, vice-president of recycling operations for Value Village. "By donating these items, instead of simply throwing them away, you can give back to your community and save quality goods from polluting the Earth. In fact, Value Village operates one of the largest recycling programs in the world, keeping more than 500 million pounds of goods out of landfills last year alone."

So how does it work?

DID YOU KNOW?

Value Village buys its merchandise from more than 60 different non-profit offices across Canada. This unique relationship helps support the community programs of each non-profit and also creates more jobs.

Every Value Village location partners with a charitable organization in its community, such as the Canadian Diabetes Association. All year round, each store pays its non-profit partner for every donated item, including clothing, housewares, books and more — turning otherwise unused goods into sustainable funding that supports vital community programs and services. Customers can either call the non-profit for a pickup or drop off their items at the convenient Community Donation Centres located at every Value Village.

The highest-quality items are value-priced and displayed on Value Village's sales floors for purchase, while merchandise not suitable for resale is responsibly recycled — with most items being sold to developing countries and material wholesalers.

For more information on Value Village's non-profit partnerships and recycling efforts, or to find a Community Donation Centre near you, visit valuevillage.com.

GIVE IT UP... for good

The clock is ticking down to midnight Feb. 29, the final deadline to make your 2011 RRSP contribution. And while there are people who wait until the waning hours to invest, the experts caution against doing so.

"You don't want to rush something as important as your retirement savings and financial future," says Joel Neynens, a certified financial planner and the vice-president of Gordon Stirrett Wealth Management in Halifax.

Neynens offers the following last-minute investing tips:

Allocate your RRSP to a "cash position." When you hand over your RRSP funds to your banker or financial adviser, you don't have to choose on the spot how you want them to be invested.

"Don't feel like you have to decide what type of asset class you have to invest in right away," says Neynens. This way, the money will sit in the "cash position" portion of the account until you are ready to make an investing move. "There's no time limit to doing so," says Neynens. "And you'll still get an RRSP tax receipt."

The major downside to this approach is that if you keep the funds in the cash position for an extended period, you won't get the potential rate of return you would if you have invested them.

Get professional advice if you need it. If time is of the essence and you are not comfortable handling your own finances, it's important to seek professional advice — especially if you are just starting to save for the future.

"New investors are often trying to get a handle on what RRSPs and what investments are eligible," says Neynens. "It can be quite confusing."

Don't get down to the wire. Even though the RRSP deadline is midnight, "unless you're investing online, you really only have until whatever time the bank or your financial adviser's office closes on deadline day."

Which choices make cents?

YLVA
FOR METRO

The big question around this time of year is ... should you contribute to your RRSP or use the money to reduce debt?

Here are some things to think about.

RRSP

An RRSP investment, says Jason Round, head of financial planning support for RBC Financial Planning, provides some sense that you will achieve a certain rate of return based on the level of risk you are willing to take on.

There is also an immediate tax deduction.

Also, if you are a higher income earner and you expect that during retirement you are going to earn less, then that would be significant motivation, too, says Round.

Peter Drake, vice-president, retirement and economic research, Fidelity Investments Canada, says if you start early, even if you only make a small contribution, that money is working for you over a longer period of time. And you need to save less. You also get into the important habit of saving for retirement.

DEBT

When debt is non-constructive (you are using it to buy a car, house, go on a vacation, etc., and you pay interest charges every month), clearing debt should be your first plan of attack, according to Anthony Williams, vice-president of academic affairs, Canadian Institute of Financial Planning. For example, if you owe $1,000 on a credit card that has an interest rate of 20 per cent, you would save 20 per cent in after-tax dollars. "That's com-elling when GICs are paying next to nothing, the stock market is up and down, mutual funds up and down. Where are you going to get a 20 per cent return after tax and, for some people, 35 per cent rate of return before tax?"

But remember — if you just pay off debt you may at some point have to go back into debt to make up for the fact you didn't save.

WHAT TO DO?

One common strategy, says Williams, is to make an RRSP contribution (which addresses retirement savings) and then use the tax refund to pay down debt.

Thinking about your child's future

With just a few days until the deadline for the RRSP contribution, many families are looking at their savings and wondering if they should use the money for their RRSP or open a registered education savings plan (RESP) for their children?

It's not always an easy decision.

"You really have to look at it not just from a retirement savings, mortgage or education plan point-of-view, but from the entire context," says Anthony Williams, vice-president of academic affairs, Canadian Institute of Financial Planning.

If education savings is a goal, he suggests making an RRSP contribution and, with the tax deduction, use the money to contribute towards your children's education.

"An RESP is a dedicated savings plan for your child's education and you get a government grant ..."

An RESP is a dedicated savings plan for your child's education and you get a government grant, says Williams. It's also tax-deferred saving so there are no tax implications on any of the growth while it's in the plan.

"We have RESPs for both of our kids," says Jill Briggs, a Toronto mom with two boys, Henri, 8, and Elliot, 6.

"We believe that the cost of post-secondary education will be very high by the time our kids are at that stage, and we wanted to ensure that we can afford to send them without crippling ourselves financially. But we also want to be able to help them with the cost so that they don't graduate with huge debt as well."

While there aren't immediate tax benefits, says Jason Round, head of financial planning support for RBC Financial Planning, when you make a contribution, the government will contribute up to $500 under the Canada Education Savings Grant Program into the plan — and that's free money.

The negative is the RESP can only be used for education. If your child doesn't use it for post-secondary education, even though you can take out the amount you have contributed, you have to repay any grants you received and there might be penalties as well.

Opportunity in Disguise

► Missing this year's RRSP boat doesn't mean financial ship will sink

If you don't make this year's RRSP contribution deadline of midnight Feb. 29 and you are hoping there is a grace period post-deadline, you will be out of luck. But arriving late to the investment party can be an opportunity in disguise.

"Trying to scramble to invest in an RRSP at tax time is challenging," says Joel Neynens, a certified financial planner and the vice-president of Gordon Stirrett Wealth Management in Halifax.

Instead, Neynens advises paying yourself first throughout the year. "If you have a consistent monthly income, monthly contributions are ideal," he says.

If you don't have fixed monthly earnings because you are self-employed, you could set up a separate bank account and sock RRSP funds into it whenever you have a windfall. Then you will have to summon the self-discipline to resist the temptation of using those funds for non-RRSP-related reasons.

Assessing your whole financial picture, either on your own or with a financial adviser, is a good idea at least once a year. That way, if you suddenly become widowed or divorced, or you inherit or win a large sum of money, you will be sure that some of it will be directed to your RRSP before you start shopping.

Whether you have a partner or children will also affect your financial snapshot.

If you are lucky enough to get an income tax refund this year, you could roll it into next year's RRSP. "The key is to not use it for discretionary spending," says Neynens. "Generally, if the money is in front of you, you'll want to spend it. So hide it in that separate bank account and forget about it."

That doesn't mean you shouldn't take a well-deserved vacation for working so hard, but maybe it will mean the difference between a family trip to Disneyland and a camping trip close to home.

When next year's deadline is looming, try not to wait until deadline day to hand over your cash. The sooner before the final moment you can do so, the better prepared you will be. And being organized and committed to saving is key. "It's a case of paying yourself first ahead of other things and prioritizing your wants versus your needs," says Neynens.

"It's all about choices. You have to ask yourself whether HDTV is more important to you than saving for retirement. Then get ready to sharpen your pencil and ask yourself, 'Do I really need this?'"

Maintain a strict regimen to save

SMART INVESTING

TALBOT BOGGS

How Me The Money! While that saying was made famous in the 1996 film Jerry McGuire, it still has significance for Canadians and their ability to contribute to their registered retirement savings plans (RRSPs).

A recent poll by Investors Group found that approximately 62 per cent of Canadians don't have any money to invest in their RRSPs after they meet their basic living expenses. Other studies and statistics reveal that Canadians' contributions to their RRSPs are well below the allowable limits.

Statistics Canada reports that a little less than six million Canadians who filed an income tax return contributed to their RRSPs in 2010, down 0.2 per cent from 2009, and while total contributions increased 2.6 per cent to $33.9 billion, those contributions represented only 5.1 per cent of the total contribution room available.

RRSP contribution rates are low for several reasons.

"A lot of people may make contributions, but not to the maximum, and then you've got people who don't contribute at all," says Murray Pituley, director of tax and estate planning with Investors Group.

Pituley offers some tips for Canadians to reduce expenses and save so they can show their RRSPs some money.

He suggests people track their spending more carefully to identify areas where they can cut back and make efficiencies to free up money for their RRSPs. "Eating out and having those coffees every day are expenses that add up over time," Pituley says.

The next strategy is to pay yourself first. Set up a pre-authorized savings or RRSP contribution plan so money is automatically taken out of your account every month, and prepare a budget based on what is left over.

"This provides the regimen to save that a lot of people need, because once the money is in your RRSP you tend to leave it there because of the tax implications if you withdraw it," Pituley notes. "It's also an efficient way to invest because you can continue to buy into the market when it is down."

If you get a lump sum payment such as a bonus, a tax refund or even an inheritance, put some or all of it into your RRSP if you have the contribution room.

If you intend to maximize your RRSP contributions, you can apply to the Canada Revenue Agency to have your employer reduce the amount of tax withheld at source, which will put more disposable income into your pocket during the year to put into your RRSP instead of waiting until the end of the year.

Many tax refunds are the result of too much employment income being withheld at source. The only reason you get a refund is that you have overpaid your taxes the previous year. In essence, you gave the government an interest-free loan and the refund only returns the principal amount of that overpayment.

In some cases, it may make sense to borrow to contribute to your RRSP.

In general it may make sense to borrow if you are in a high tax bracket because you will get a larger tax refund, which then can be used to pay off the loan.

Because the interest on the loan is not tax deductible, it's important to pay off the loan as soon as possible.

When do you start income planning?

At a certain point in life, financial experts advise that you will have to start “income planning” for retirement as opposed to just saving.

“Essentially, you’re looking at what piles to put your money in and when to start shifting it around,” explains Jason Round, head of financial planning support for RBC Financial Planning. The registered retirement income fund (RRIF) can play a big role in this exercise. The RRIF is a tax-deferred plan that generates income from the savings you have accumulated in your RRSP.

The government requires that RRSPs be converted to RRIFs by Dec. 31 of the year the plan owner turns 71, if not earlier. Then you have to start making withdrawals in the year following conversion, says Pound, and there is a legislated minimum based on your age.

The biggest reason to convert RRSPs to RRIFs early is you need income.

But what’s important to know is that if you convert to a RRIF and start taking minimum payments, you won’t have withholding taxes taken off by your financial institution, says Round.

While 43 per cent of younger Canadians now hold RRSPs, this number still lags behind the 69 per cent of boomers with RRSPs.

For the average retiree — and 62 is the average retirement age now in Canada — converting RRSPs to RRIFs when they retire and long before the age 71 deadline means “you will reduce the amount you’ll have to balance later on when you’re entitled to old age security.”

The funds withdrawn from RRIFs turn into taxable income and may impact how much old age security you can get.

Annuity or RRIF?

When you convert your RRSPs, you can put them into a RRIF or an annuity.

An annuity provides a certain sum of money regularly, explains Peter Drake, vice-president, retirement and economic research, Fidelity Investments Canada. It also provides a high degree of certainty.

“The downside of an annuity,” says Drake, “is you no longer have access to that capital.”

A RIFF, on the other hand, lets you maintain control over how the money is invested. There is a minimum withdrawal that you have to take each year and it is taxed.

Blues cruise into top spot

► Arnott scores twice on power play as St. Louis beats Flames to claim share of division lead

BLUES	FLAMES

Jason Arnott scored a pair of power-play goals Monday night to lead St. Louis to a 3-1 victory over the Calgary Flames, moving the Blues into a tie with Detroit for top spot in the Central Division.

David Backes also scored for St. Louis (39-17-7), which is 9-3-0 in its last 12 games and moves to within two points of the Vancouver Canucks for first place overall.

Curtis Glencross scored the lone goal for Calgary (28-24-11), which remains in 11th place in the Western Conference, three points back of the eighth-place Dallas Stars.

Calgary recognized Hall of Fame defenceman Al MacInnis before the game, honouring his No. 2 by raising it to the rafters of the Scotiabank Saddledome.

Arnott gave St. Louis a 2-1 lead with 20 seconds remaining in the first period when he scored on a long slapshot that eluded goaltender Miikka Kiprusoff.

He made it 3-1 at 6:21 of the second by corralling a rebound off Patrick Berglund's shot, skating through the slot and shovelling in a backhand.

Backes erased Calgary's 1-0 lead on a rare bad goal surrendered by Kiprusoff at 14:13 of the first period.

Backes flung a harmless-looking wrist shot at the net as he skated down the wing and it squeaked through the pads of the Flames goaltender.

It was the first shaky night for Kiprusoff in a long time. The 35-year-old Finn, who finished the night with 21 saves on 24 shots, has been sensational for the Flames all season and one of the main reasons Calgary has been able to climb back into playoff contention, picking up points in 10 of their previous 11 games.

Calgary has been outshot 11 games in a row.

Jaroslav Halak won his third straight start for St. Louis and finished the night with 20 saves.

The Flames opened the scoring at 5:11 when Cory Sarich's nice pass gave Glencross an open lane to the net and he sent a perfect wrist shot over the blocker of Halak and just inside the goal post.

It was the 19th goal of the season for Glencross and first in three games since returning from a sprained knee.

The game featured two teams that both chose to stand pat at the NHL trade deadline.

While the Blues rewarded the confidence that St. Louis management showed in the current makeup of the club, the same could not be said for Calgary.

The Flames generated only 11 shots on goal in a listless opening 40 minutes, drawing the ire of the sell-out crowd of 19,289.

Canucks trade Hodgson to add 'power'

Mike Gillis wanted to change the balance of power on his own team as well as in the Western Conference.

The Vancouver Canucks general manager made a splash at Monday's NHL trading deadline by sending slick rookie centre Cody Hodgson to the Buffalo Sabres for burly winger Zack Kassian. Both are former first-round draft choices.

"We needed to have more power," Gillis told Vancouver radio station Team 1040. "We have enough skill."

Hodgson ranks among league leaders in rookie scoring with 16 goals and 17 assists. The transaction highlighted an otherwise moderate day of trading.

Several teams, including the Calgary Flames, remained on the sidelines rather than participate in the flurry of deals common on previous deadline days. As a result, some prized players, including Columbus Blue Jackets captain Rick Nash and Canucks backup goaltender Cory Schneider, stayed put with their clubs.

Flames

Despite expressing his frustration with the Calgary Flames last week, Jay Feaster gave his team a vote of confidence on Monday.

► "We believe the answers are still in that room," said Feaster when he met with the media an hour after the deadline had passed. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nash requested a trade last month, according to Blue Jackets general manager Scott Howson. Howson said there were "significant discussions," but no deal was struck.

"The price was high," Howson said. "And I don't apologize for that."

Nash's non-trade was emblematic of a relatively tranquil deadline day. There were 16 deals, but nothing that came close to altering the fabric of the NHL universe.

The Nashville Predators spent the future for the present by adding left-wing Andrei Kostitsyn and two-way forward Paul Gaustad in exchange for a slew of draft picks.

Nashville also acquired defenceman Hal Gill earlier this month and sits in fifth place in the Western Conference.

"I think with these trades we've certainly given us a chance to play with the big boys this year when we get in the playoffs," Predators general manager David Poile said.

Forecasts call for Heat, Thunder

► First-place teams in East, West seem to be headed toward NBA finals as second half of season gets underway

Kevin Durant says it's too early to think about a potential Heat-Thunder NBA finals.

It seems hard to ignore at the season's midpoint.

The teams share the league's best record and both rolled into the all-star break. With Durant and Russell Westbrook on one side and LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh looking to avenge their finals disappointment, the series could be a thriller.

But Chicago is right on Miami's heels in the East, and a number of contenders could emerge for the Thunder out West.

The second half opens Tuesday, and the other big story is Dwight Howard's situation. Orlando has to decide by the March 15 deadline if it will keep or trade its franchise centre.

James and the Heat burn for a second chance. Durant and the Thunder are storming toward their first opportunity.

An NBA finals matchup is easy to picture.

Durant isn't looking. "It's too early for that," the all-star game MVP said. "We're trying to take it a game at a time, a day at a time. I know in Oklahoma City, we look forward to getting better every day, and we'll see what happens."

If the all-star game was an indication, the series would be a thriller.

Durant and Westbrook helped shoot the West to a big lead. James and Wade almost brought the East all the way back before James' turnover in the final seconds allowed the West to escape with a 152-149 victory.

The races

The East appears to be shaping up as a two-team race between the Heat and Bulls, who are a half-game back despite battling injuries to all-stars Derrick Rose and Luol Deng and especially to Richard Hamilton.

With half of a 66-game season left to play, a handful of teams stand out as contenders.

► Indiana and Philadelphia have been surprisingly strong, New York has recovered from a poor start behind Jeremy Lin and Boston hopes to bounce back from a disappointing first half.

► The playoff picture is less clear in the West. San Antonio surged into the break despite playing for much of the first half without Manu Ginobili, the Los Angeles Clippers have become quick contenders since acquiring Chris Paul, and Dallas may still be good enough for a long playoff run.

Miami and Oklahoma City rolled into the break with a share of the NBA's best record at 27-7. The Heat have won eight in a row in overwhelming fashion; the Thunder have won five straight and are 15-1 at home.

With the lockout delaying the season and reducing it to 66 games, the all-star break actually comes right at the mid-point of the season. Many teams were happy to have the break and eager for practice time after so little was available because of the frequency of games.

That hasn't affected the Heat or Thunder, who rank first and third in the NBA in scoring with 103.7 and 102.7 points, respectively. Miami has been as dominant as expected when it put its trio together, winning by nearly 10 points a game and even more during their win streak.

The Thunder were built more gradually, winning just 23 games three seasons ago. They reached the West finals last year and seem poised to go further now.

"We worked our way to the top," Westbrook said. "So it's not a bad thing to be on top and be where we want to be at this halfway point."

And come June, Heat and Thunder could in the NBA's forecast.

Today's horoscope

- ♈ Aries March 21-April 20
Something will happen that compels you to question a belief or an attitude that has been a part of your life for as long as you can remember.
♉ Taurus April 21-May 21
You don't need the approval of family or friends or work colleagues to do what you know to be right.
♊ Gemini May 22-June 21
You will surprise more than a few people today by how easily you move from one set of circumstances to another.
♋ Cancer June 22-July 22
Stay focused on your number one

- objective and don't let anything else that might be going on around you tempt you off at a tangent.
♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23
Someone will make you an interesting offer today but you need to be certain it is right for you before you accept.
♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22
It's kiss and make up time.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
You've been working your fingers to the bone and need to go easier on yourself for a while.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22
You will be in an assertive mood today and that's good.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec.

- ♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec.
21 Don't expect other people to think logically and act in predictable ways.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Most likely you will do something today that leaves everyone around you open-mouthed in amazement.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18
You may be having your doubts about a commitment of some kind. If so you will need to make a decision today: either you pull out now or stay with it for the long haul.
♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
Something will not work out the way you expected, but it really doesn't matter. SALLY BROMPTON
